

“Alive in Wonderland” The Sitcom?

I have finally decided what format I am going to use to write the sitcom treatment based on my column, “Alive in Wonderland.”

Recently, I asked some readers how I should approach writing an outline and eventual treatment about an Orange County writer who has a blog/column at The Orange County Register called “Alive in Wonderland”. (Oh, look at that...same as me.)

After weighing the advantages of doing it online in a blog verses doing it privately and sending it to the usual suspects, I have made up my mind and explain it all here, in this very close-up and tangent-ish (ohhh made up a word) video I made this morning. Here is my answer...

I just want to note that I say I am not “just” married to Larry, I spent an enormous amount of time trying to edit the “just” out, but I say it so quickly, I couldn’t. So, for the record, being married to Larry is not a “just” sort of thing, he’s a big deal—really, really big deal.

I also want to note that I realize I speak like a teenager.

Reality can be brutal.

Here are some of my favorite “Alive in Wonderland’s” so far:
Ways to amuse yourself in Orange County.

Frenchy’s Great Escape.

Hockey-me vs. Girl-me at the Anaheim Ducks Game.