

Blueprint, Nooooooooooooo

☒ I am sorry to be the one to tell you this if you haven't already heard, but the latest issue of Blueprint Magazine will be the last. (For reference to Jill and Jana, this would be like People Magazine folding...I know...traumatic.)

I have told you all about my love for the magazine. Thank goodness their nifty blog, Bluelines, will still be around, but the hold-in-your-hand, cut-out-the-things-you-like format is going the way of Martha Stewart Kids.

I love the death-defying spin that Martha gives to the magazine's demise (nutshell: no one reads anything printed on paper anymore.) We could all learn from her rosy-ways now, can't we?

(Whoa, I'm a little dizzy...wait... I'm okay now...no...yes...no...think of Dwell...okay, I'm okay, really.)
