

Bumped by the Pope...and other things that have happend to me today

The Orange County Register picked up my post below "The (More) Real(istic) Housewives of Orange County" and plopped it right on the front page.

There we are, just out for a day at the (totally awesome) ARTbar and...bam! Front page! So then it just took off...comments came rolling in.. and then...bumped by the Pope...

But then put back up.

Next, the Editor calls..."It's crazy here." By the end of the day they had over 9,000 hits! It was a fun piece to write and of course it was all in fun, but take a look at all of the comments here: Read them here...just scroll down...

Wow, Does God exist? Not sure what some of the comments even mean? Some had to be explained to me by aforementioned Editor. But I think it has shown that there is room for talk about "we" housewives. It hit a nerve with people. Some got the humor, some didn't. And as I've said before, the negative stuff rolls off my back, as long as I have the support of my family, friends and people who read me (and like me of course).

Most of the comments were positive and inspire me to keep going. I wish I could respond to each and every one, but might not get ANY sleep tonight if I did..more to come...