

Diet Coke Lovers of the World Unite

This is arguably the stupidest thing I have ever spent time writing about, arguably.

People can get really demented about their loyalty to a particular soft drink. This is completely understandable in my opinion. I am a Diet Coke lover. Yes, lover and I have made an extremely important decision: this is the only way to drink Diet Coke.

It is simple, graceful and I think, very continental.

No more humongous, water tower-sized, 32 ouncers dripping all over my desk. This is the new standard.

In a pinch, I will get a fountain drink from Target or the drive-thru, but I am going to try to avoid it at all costs. They are now deemed “tacky” in my eyes, along the lines of wearing Crocs to dinner. (Please stop doing that.)

Here is one of my favorite comedians, Gary Gulman, and his thoughts on my beloved (Diet) Coke. He addresses the whole cola war issue with his usual tomfoolery.

Please click here to be linked to video of Gary.