

Extreme Virtual Shopping

I don't know how this sport started with me, but I am pretty sure it won't ever catch on at ESPN. I call it Extreme Virtual Shopping. I go online to one of my favorite stores, like Boden and throw everything I want unflinchingly into my shopping cart. The totals can reach astronomical amounts.

This is where it get pretty knarly, I go through all the steps; order summary, shipping address, form of payment, then, at the last possible minute, I double click the heck out of there.

I have no idea why I do this. I think I need to go talk to somebody.
