

Friday five: Parody Links, Plus One Speech-Centered Pet Peeve

1) From The Onion: Mean automakers dash nation's hope for  flying cars.

2) News Biscuit: Police to be armed with sarcasm, oh, and this one too Redundancy for man who lived each day as if it was his last.

3) From The Soup: iPhone.

4) Of Course, New Zealand's folk parody band Flight of the Conchords: Sello Tape.

This week's speech-centered pet peeve is when people say "supposebly" instead of "supposedly." Please, don't do that any more.