

Revolution is just a T-shirt away: Bloggy Couture

This is how something like this happens...You are chatting at lunch with a fellow blogger, not just any blogger, a high-functioning blogger, a productive one, anyway, you are having lunch and you say something like, "Wouldn't it be great if there were t-shirts for bloggers?"

"Go on," high-functioning, super performing blogger says...So you shoot your mouth off and suggest t-shirts that would read:

"My friend has a mommy blog I never read. I'm too busy parenting my children."

"I can tell by the questions you are asking you haven't been reading my blog."

"I take pictures of my lunch."

"Keep talking, you are so blog-worthy."

You know, along those lines...

Well, then this HFB speeds home in her Navigator and comes up with a name, designs a logo, opens a Cafe Press store, cleans up your ramblings, adds better ones, throws journals and coffee cups to the mix and sends you an email with it all-done!

That HFB is none other than Marcy at The Glamorous Life.. The "mouth-shooter-offer" is me.

Introducing Bloggy Couture.

Believe me, this idea would have gone the way of the "all night doggie wash" idea I had 10 years ago if it weren't for Marcy.