5 Things Which Are An Affront To My Husband's Masculinity Which I Don't Understand, But Have Learned To Accept

Alleged Affront: Using a staw.

His explanation: You never saw John Wayne use a straw, did you?

Alleged Affront: Walking a dog who is wearing a sweater. His explanation: Is self-explanatory.

Alleged Affront: Checking Luggage.
His Explanation: Baggage Claim is for amateurs.

Alleged Affront: Shampoo and then condition. His explanation: Why do in two steps what you can do it one.

Alleged Affront: Suggesting 4-year-old son dress as "Robin" for Halloween.
His explaination: There will be no sidekicks in his family.

Alleged Affront: Being issued a Disney credit card with Bambi on it.
His explanation: Mickey is the only acceptable character.

Alleged Affront: Taking a pain killer when in pain. His explanation: No time. (huh?)

Alleged Affront: Attempting to talk about hilarity of old boyfriend's letter found in box in closet whilst he is watching UFC Championships.

His explanation: Too many affronts to explain.

Things I would think would be an affront to his ## masculinity, which apparently are not:

Watching Jane Austen's "Emma" staring Gwyneth Paltrow (suspect it has something to do with Gwyneth's beautiful neck).
